WEATHER FORECAST.

Fair tonight and probably Tuesday. Slightly warmer Tuesday. Light variable winds shifting to southerly Tuesday. Probably becoming moderate to fresh.

UNVARNISHED FACTS.

There seems to be in the state of Wisconsin a common practice among officers and employees of the state to draw several different salaries from the taxpayer in the same year.

A commissioner will be appointed, or officer elected to an office, where the compensation is fixed by the state at so much per year; yet, these same officers and commissioners will draw salaries for services rendered this state, although they are already drawing a ready salary from the taxpayer as compensation for their entire time. The same practice seems to be in evidence among the professors at the university and as we would necessarily expect, the students have imbibed the same idea from the cup of theories.

As an illustration:
L. B. Wolfson, assistant professor of Semitic Languages and Hellenistic Greek, has a salary of $2,000.00
From the Free Library Commission $800.00
From the Legislative Reference Bureau 1,800.00
From State Printing Board 766.62
From revisor of statutes 268.38

Total $3,825.00
By what right has a professor of languages drawing a salary of $2,000 per annum to teach languages at the university, to be paid by the state for enacting laws, the sum of $1,800, and then stepping into the Free Library commission and drawing $800 more? Not contented with that he becomes a revisor of our statutes and draws $268.38, and then he serves on the State Printing board.

Is it possible that this man is an expert in each of these five different lines? Is it possible that this professor of Greek can be of any assistance whatsoever in drafting laws and revising statutes, and at the same time be an expert in printing matters? If this was a solitary instance then it might be passed, but a more thorough examination will disclose 50 or more professors practicing the same system.

Now in reference to our state commissioners, here is the eminent Professor Adams who draws a salary of $3,100.00 from the Free Library Commission, as one of the tax commissioners of this state; yet, he draws a further compensation on the Free Library Commission. Can we blame the students, of whom there are many in the employ of the state of doing the same thing, when their teachers set the example? Is the scholar in the school as a rule apt to be better than his teacher?

Here is Halford Erickson of the Railroad Commission drawing a salary of $5,000 and expenses, the amount in all $5,725.61, also drawing out of the public treasury as an expert under the public utilities, a branch of the Railroad Commission, $261.00, and also given credit for another disbursement of $140.81. Is it possible that having hired out to the state at the rate of five thousand dollars a year, he may charge the state for other services in the same department? Is it right?

Even our law-makers have adopted the rule. L. L. Johnson, assemblyman, drawing a salary and mileage as assemblyman $540.50
From the Insurance Dept. 994.99
From the Fire Insurance Investigation 247.01
And another sum from the Fire Insurance Investigation 54.99

Total $1,937.70
Can it be possible that a legislator drawing a salary from the insurance department is a proper person either to investigate it or pass laws in reference to it?

These instances might be multiplied to cover hundreds and hundreds of such cases. The instances cited here are not different, except in amounts, from others.

There seems to have grown up in this state a lack of proper sense of right and wrong regarding public moneys that has culminated in the greatest state expense in proportion to the size of the state and its population that has ever existed in this Union. There seems to be men, holding office, with a blunted sense of right and wrong. These men are not accused of criminal dishonesty, but they are men who have been brought up, and boys that are educated in this same wrong idea as to the use of public money, and have been in control for the last fifteen years in this state—what else can we expect but an excess of offices, office-holders and extravagance?

When a state with less than three millions of people has payrolls with upwards of 57 hundred names simply to do the states business, it is very evident that the struggle of the officers of the state is not to do effectively and carefully the business of this state, but their ambition has grown to be, to do as many things experimentally as possible, at the expense of the people of the state. And that the love of power, and the love of office has overshadowed their ideas of right and wrong.

The only remedy is a complete revolution in the methods of the administration of public business, and in the use of public moneys, which is not simply the amount paid by the tax payers but the moneys that come into the state treasury from every source, and ought to be used with the care and guarded with the same jealousy, that the small estate of the deceased friend is guarded by the administrator or executor, under proceedings in county court.

Until that rule is practiced, we can not expect any improvements in the state affairs.

The improvement can not come from the politician, or from the man who wants office from private gain, or to testify an ambition. It can only come from the independent, non-partisan movement where the officers are acting as a duty, which is a part of the burden of the right of citizenship.

Now that Caniza has been turned down by the A. B. C. peace envoys at Niagara Falls he has decided to set a government up all of his own. Meanwhile, the A. B. C. envoys have decided upon Felix Diaz, their fellow conspirator when Madero was assassinated, as the provisional president of Mexico proper and doubtless Wilson will recognize this murder while he refused to recognize Huerta.

Officially this is straw hat day although straw hats have been more or less worn during the past ten days. Strange how custom makes slaves of people. People must wear certain clothing at certain times of the year whether it is comfortable or not.

The terrible disaster in the St. Lawrence river, when a mighty ocean vessel was sunk, almost within sight of land, and over a thousand perished is one of those happenings that can not be explained under ordinary circumstances.

The next big holiday is the Fourth. Everyone is eagerly looking forward to the celebration that is going to be some celebration. The committee in charge report that the arrangements are being completed for every detail of a most successful day.

Wisconsin politicians are getting a trifle warm under the collar as the time approaches for the announcement of platform and attitude on state issues approaches. They realize that the Non partizan movement is growing in strength daily.

ULSTERITES AND SUFFRAGETS CALL ASQUITH NAMES

Premier Asquith (a new photograph)

Recent events in England have served to make Premier Asquith a very much hated man by at least two elements of the British public. First the suffragets dislike him because of his continued and very firm opposition to equal suffrage. And he is quite disliked by the Orangemen of Ulster because under his leadership Ireland has been given home rule.

About the Tango.

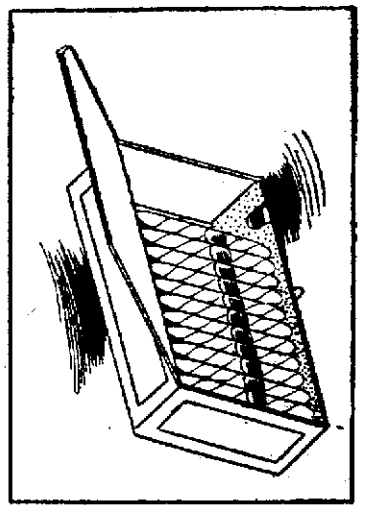

The tango mystery grows all the time. It is asserted upon every hand that nobody dances it. Still, the furor continues. Ask a dancing master if he teaches the tango and he will tell you no. He knows what it is—he has seen it done by experts—but he doesn't teach it. It is not a popular dance. There seems to be two tangos. One is the tango which comes to us from the Argentine Republic—a dance for experts—a slow, difficult thing that is not worth doing at all unless one can do it very well indeed. The other tango is any new dance—the Castle walk, the hesitation waltz, or anything our fathers did not dance. This latter is the popular tango danced all over the country. It is the one at which the people who do not care about dancing continually thunder. It is not the tango at all. The tango is a myth, and they are knocking the daylights out of it every day.

CIGARS KEPT MOIST

A New Box Which Has a Humidor Inserted Along Its Length.

The cigar dealer keeps his stock in a case which has provision made for maintaining the interior at a desired degree of humidity, so that when they are taken from the case the cigars are just right for consumption, but the purchaser buying a box of cigars has not always the means at hand to keep his smokes in this condition. But with the new invention recently patented by a Philadelphia genius every box of cigars will be supplied with the means of keeping the contents at the approved moisture point. This is accomplished by making the box a shade wider than usual to allow room

HUMIDOR INSIDE THE CIGAR BOX.

For the insertion of a perforated plate. The latter is fitted with flanges which maintain it at a slight distance from the side of the box, and this room offers opportunity for supplying a moistened pad. The proximity of this moisture to the ends of the cigars permits the latter to take up the vapor readily and each cigar will be supplied with the same amount of moisture without regard to its position in the box. The fault which is so common with other humidors, that the top layers take up all the moisture, is entirely overcome by the new method.

ARMY GIRL TO BE AN AUTUMN BRIDE

Miss Helen Heyl.

Miss Helen Heyl, daughter of Col. C. H. Heyl, U. S. A., and one of the prettiest girls in the army circle at Washington, will become the bride of Lieut. Milo P. Fox of the engineers early in the fall. The engagement was recently announced.

Cat Reasoned Wisely.

Romances quote a remarkable story about a cat's reasoning power. While a paraffin lamp was being trimmed, some of the oil fell on the back of the cat, and a cinder from the fire shortly afterward touching it, the fur became ignited. The cat instantly made for the door and, running up the village street, plunged into the watering trough. She had seen her human friends at home put out their kitchen fire with water, and she must have reasoned from this fact.

Unkind Words.

Unkind words do as much harm as unkind deeds. Many a heart has been stabbed to death by a few little words. There is a charity which consists in withholding words, in keeping back harsh judgments, in abstaining from speech, it to speak is to condemn. Such charity hears the tale of slander, but does not repeat it; listens in silence, but forbears comment, then locks the unpleasant secret within the very depths of the heart.

ANNIE LOUISE CARY

And Her Favorite "Robin Adair"

The indisputable queen of song in her day was Annie Louise Cary. She was one of the world's famous contraltos when she retired from the operatic stage at the very height of her career in opera. She retained the sweet, wholesome characteristics of the American girl all during her musical triumphs. She made her debut in Copenhagen, although she studied in Milan. For three years she delighted European audiences before making her appearance in America. For over twelve years, with the exception of a brief European tour, she delighted American audiences with the charms of her voice and personality. But to hear her sing "Robin Adair," that simple old song, and that masterpiece of Arthur Sullivan's "The Day is Done," and Longfellow's "The Day is Done," with the rich tones of the happy, good-natured personality that always charmed, she always left the audience breathless and spellbound. "Robin Adair," "The Day is Done," and many other favorites of Cary, are to be found in "Heart Songs," now being distributed to the readers of this paper. See Coupon elsewhere in this issue for terms.

HARRIS WANTS TO BE GEORGIA'S GOVERNOR

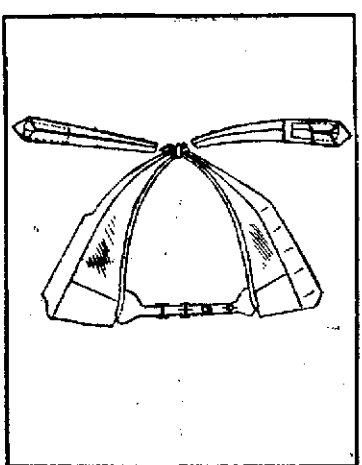

William J. Harris.

William J. Harris of Atlanta, Georgia, who succeeded E. Dana Durand as chief of the U. S. census bureau a year ago, has just resigned in order that he may seek the Democratic nomination for governor of Georgia. Harris is one of the best known Democrats in the South and at the time he was named head of the census bureau was chairman of the Georgia state Democratic committee. He is about thirty-nine years old and is president of a fire insurance company in Atlanta.

VEST AND NECKTIE IN ONE

Overcomes Many of the Objections to the Old Style of Garment.

There are some masculine dress reformers who take issue with the vest, claiming that it is an entirely superfluous piece of clothing, having many of the undesirable features of the feminine corsets which are generally condemned. The cut of the vest shown herewith is unique in that it has no back and therefore gives the wearer greater freedom of movement and also that there is com-lined with it a necktie feature. It has been recently patented. The two separable sections forming the front of the garment, are held together, when adjusted on the person of the wearer, by means of a belt at the lower portion and an extension of the upper portion, passes around the neck and forms either a bow tie or a four-in-hand.

WOMEN HAVE TO SMILE

In a great many cases and try to make those around them happy, while they are racked with the pain of organic trouble. Few men realize how common such heroism is. The remedy for this condition is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—a simple remedy made from roots and herbs, which for forty years has been overcoming the most obstinate ills of women. Every woman suffering from female ills owes it to herself and family to give it a fair trial. Advertisement.

To Keep Flowers.
If woody-stemmed flowers are stripped of their bark for an inch or more from the end of the stem, the flowers will remain fresh longer, the explanation being that they absorb the water more freely.

GATHERS UP THE VERMIN

A Trap Which is Part of the Perch on Which the Birds Roost.

Chickens are very subject to several kinds of vermin, which must be kept down in a measure, or they get so numerous that the birds' peace of mind is so greatly disturbed that it interferes with the bird's egg-laying propensities. A new invention is shown herewith by which it is designed to keep down the numbers of the pest by catching them in a trap, which is combined with the roost on which the birds sleep. The habits of the chicken are such that this character is to get at the birds while they are roosting, and they attack the birds in such numbers that its health is seriously interfered with. After working the bird's blood the insects return to the crevices to be found in the woodwork about the perch, so as to be ready for subsequent visits. The features of the new trap is that it enters into the construction of the perch. There are holes along the length of the perch which make inviting harboring places for the vermin; but when they enter these they are overcome by the force of a germicide contained in trays, which are disposed of within the interior of the perch. For convenience in cleaning these trays may be withdrawn from the ends without disturbing the perch.

LOCAL POSTMASTER WEDS IN THE EAST

J. J. CUNNINGHAM AND MISS GLADYS SELDEN, FORMERLY OF FOX LAKE, TAKE VOWS.

CEREMONY HELD TODAY

Bride and Groom Will Take Ocean Trip Returning to Janesville the Middle of This Month.

J. J. Cunningham, Janesville's new postmaster, and Miss Gladys Selden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Selden of Lima Center, until lately residents of Fox Lake, Wis., were united in marriage today at the home of the bride's aunt at West Somerville, Mass., a suburb of Boston.

This announcement comes as a surprise to many of Mr. Cunningham's friends in this city who were unaware of his immediate matrimonial intentions.

The bride's parents came to Wisconsin from New York and until recently had resided at Fox Lake, Dodge county, before removing to Lima Center, where Mr. Selden operates a coal and lumber yard.

"Since the death of the bride's uncle at West Somerville, last fall, Miss Selden has been living with her aunt at the Boston suburb where the wedding was quietly solemnized to day.

The bride is a young lady of splendid attainment, of a charming disposition, and is very highly esteemed by her many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham will enjoy a short ocean trip visiting Washington, D. C., and several other large cities before arriving in Janesville in the middle of the month. They will be at home at 618 Court street after September 1st.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ARE NOW IN DEMAND

Eight Are Issued at County Clerk's Office and One Marriage Is Solemnized in Court Chambers.

FLY KILLERS CLOSED CAMPAIGN ON FRIDAY

TWENTY-SEVEN SWATTERS TURNED IN 14,700 ON LAST DAY—BIG SUCCESS RESULTS.

TOTAL DEAD, 18,700

Junior Civic League Youngsters Pleaded Committee With Diligent Work Shown During Past Six Weeks.

The champion "Fly Swatters," members of the Junior Civic League, closed their fly killing campaign last Friday, when 27 big stickers turned in to the committee at the public library, 14,700 flies, bringing the total killed in the campaign up to 18,700.

The prediction made a week ago, that an extremely large number would be turned in on the last day, came true, for in addition to this large number turned in practically every youngster held in reserve all the way from ten to ninety pests, which were of no account, because of their not being in lots of one hundred.

Many of the 27 swatters who turned in flies on last Friday, live on Locust street. The committee report that few if any pests were turned in by children residing on the east side of Main street, especially in the Adams, Lincoln, Grant and Washington schools.

After investigating in the wards where little success resulted, the committee report that there are fewer flies, due to the lack of places where the pests usually congregate.

The fourth ward has within its limits, five stables, and closer examination of the committee found that the youngsters had gone to the stables to procure the majority of their dead disease spreaders.

The children turning in flies last Friday, gave in the following list, together with the number of flies:

Clarence Hager, 608 Locust St. 400
Carl Zahn, 611 Locust St. 600
Charles Hatherly, 735 Prairie Ave. 700
Wm. Rhoads, 517 Locust St. 100
Catherine Peirce, 1283 Milton Ave. 200
Helen Wilcox, 1301 Sherman Ave. 600
Gertrude Buggs, 622 Locust St. 400
Annie Toldrian, 612 Locust St. 400
Edna Greiger, 511 Locust St. 300
Helen Holst, 528 Locust St. 200
Edna Schilling, 602 Locust St. 400
Helen Miller, Prairie Ave. 500
Alice Levzow, 703 Prairie Ave. 400
Doris Carlson, 718 Prairie Ave. 200
Margaret Bick, 602 Locust St. 200
Sigmund Dahley, R. F. D. No. 400
Katherine Seidmore, 214 Mineral Point Ave. 1700
Madeleine Colip, 11 Peace Court, 400
Chera Rich, 535 Locust street, 1100
Miss Meyer, 3250 S. Cherry St. 500
Nancy De Lisle, 315 Center Ave. 700
Chester Gregory, 605 Chatham St. 300
Gwendolyn Jacobs, 321 So. Second St. 100
Florence Richards, 509 No. Jackson St. 100
William Seaman, 474 North Washington street 200

Total number turned in Saturday, 14,700.

Some of the anti-fly children in the above list worked real hard during the campaign and deserve a big credit. In fact, every child who turned in flies was given praise for their thrift in preventing the spread of disease. Many of the children Friday expressed a willingness to continue in the work of fly-killing.

It was with much surprise to the committee, that it is earnestly hoped that parents will encourage the children to carry on the work, which will aid in a "better Janesville."

In addition to the fly swatting campaign, the Civic League committee has succeeded in disposing of 3,200 packages of garden and flower seeds to the youngsters. The children have worked hard on this movement, and many of them can boast of excellent flower beds and gardens, brought about by their own efforts.

SENIOR CLASS BEGAN EXAMINATIONS TODAY

Final Test Before Graduation Faces Upper Class Today and Tuesday—Junior Phoenix Out Friday.

The senior class at the Janesville high school began writing on their term examinations this morning, expecting to close the tests by tomorrow afternoon. The juniors will begin on their exams Friday.

The two lower classes will write on their tests two days later than the juniors.

The juniors are decorating for commencement this week. Mark Jones has been appointed as chairman of the committee and he plans extensive beautifications to be placed about the auditorium gymnasium. The juniors are pleased to announce that the "Phoenix," biennial publication, will be ready for distribution by Friday of this week.

Stanley D. Dugdale, district attorney, was in Beloit this morning.

TWO MASHERS DRAW THE MAXIMUM FINES

Two Illinois Men Who Came to Janesville "For a Time," End Up in Police Court.

"Any man who will deliberately insult a woman has not a spark of manhood in him and deserves the maximum fine," remarked Judge H. L. Maxfield in the municipal court when he imposed fines of twenty-five dollars and costs each upon John Anderson of Byron, Ill., and J. P. Daily of Rockford. Both of the men were arrested Saturday afternoon when they attempted to start a flirtation with two Janesville women.

They were arrested on the charge of drunkenness and on their plea of guilty the limit fine was given them.

"Don't either of you men ever come back into my court," continued Judge Maxfield, as he passed the sentence.

"You needn't worry about that point," replied Anderson as he sorrowfully counted out the twenty-five dollars and costs each.

Both explained their presence in Janesville "to have a time" as their home cities were "dry."

Walter Meyer, a Janesville youth, was fined fifteen dollars and costs for drunkenness. The heavy fine was taxed on Meyer because he together with a companion were whipping a horse up and down the street Saturday afternoon. Judge Maxfield also reprimanded Meyer to take the pledge for one year.

William Carlson, formerly employed in the town of Harmony, paid a fine of five dollars and costs for his Decoration day speech. Austin Arner was given fifteen days in jail in default of a fifteen dollar fine for drunkenness. Henry Abblet, arrested on Sunday, was given ten days, not being able to pay a ten dollar fine. Abblet explained to the court that he obtained the liquor Saturday night and was up the river on a "party."

Charles Hall of Janesville pleaded not guilty through his attorney, Charles Pierce, to statutory charges. Hall was placed under two hundred and fifty dollars bail and the trial adjourned until September 1st.

HOMER PIGEON FLEW TO NEWARK, NEW JERSEY, IN FIVE DAYS RECENTLY

A homer pigeon, belonging to Harry Blush, 225 Racine street, was turned loose May 17th, to weeks ago yesterday, with the expectations that it would find its way to Newark, New Jersey. Mr. Blush received a letter Wednesday, May 27th, that the same bird had reached Newark five days after leaving Janesville. The letter was written by the Health Company of Newark, one of the largest pigeon raising establishments in the country, at which place Mr. Blush has purchased thirty or more birds.

Mr. Blush reports that he has a bird in his stock that has made 18 miles in 12 minutes. He has also expressed his willingness to show the public his birds any Sunday afternoon at his home.

A BRUSH WITHIN A BRUSH

A Complete Shoe Blacking Kit Arranged in Very Compact Form.

For the traveler's convenience there has been recently devised and patented a shoe blacking kit in a form that is at once compact, convenient and clean. The ordinary straight backed brush is the backbone for the combination. It is supplied with a rubber back, which is more readily to be grasped securely in the hand. This back is hollow and a portion is slidably removable, and as this end is displaced, there is revealed in its interior a dauber brush and a can of blacking. The bristles of the polishing brush are shielded by a casing which fits over them and is held firmly in place by catching grooves in the wooden back. When this outfit has been assembled it makes a very compact package, with the pie tin thoroughly protected, so that none of their soil may be imparted to objects which happen to be packed in close contact with them.

PREPARE YOURSELF FOR DAYS TO COME

REV. JOHN MCKINNEY ANALYZES
DAY OF PENTECOST IN MORN-ING ADDRESS.

REST DOUBTFUL MIND

It Is Necessary to Obey First Day of Week—Those Doing So Will be Benefited.

"This day, of the Feast of Pentecost, carries with it a teaching. That teaching will set men's doubtful mind to rest, if the day is obeyed," said the Rev. John McKinney Sunday morning at "Christ Church." My text this morning is found in the second chapter of the Acts, and the first four verses.

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place."

"And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting."

"And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with one another, as the Spirit gave them utterance."

"Oftimes our minds drift to material ideas, when we ourselves are sitting in the church at a service. The worship of the mind is not spiritual. The majority of us have not grasped the powerful sense of worshiping and worshipping right. That is why we all over again, in attempting to Christianize the moderns, a people that worship an idol, we must be far from holy, and we must be in making it better."

"He is not material like ourselves, but he is a living spirit, in every walk of life. We see, feel and know through our senses, if we are spiritual."

"Let us turn to St. Paul, and note how he sacrificed his life among the poor and rich, among the people of various lands. What drove him on? It was the spiritual instinct within him. It was the death and resurrection of Christ, the holy spirit. St. Paul spent thirty-three and one-half years in the hearts of men, doing the work of the Master and he sacrificed."

"It is a fact that everything good comes from the holy spirit" went on the Rev. John McKinney, "and the soul of God is matured through things that should be told, and heard by us. This day of Pentecost, or the first day of the week, offers a check that this life has some attention, and a great deal of Christianizing."

"Those who obey the first day, will realize a good benefit. We must prepare ourselves, for a careful preparation will enable us to receive God's many gifts. A confession is the beginning of a new life, and it takes the sin out of us."

"TANGO TRUST" FORMED
BY NEW YORK FINANCIERS

New York, June 1.—The death knell of the battleship tango probably struck in Albany the other day. At last the rating dance may be doomed. Wall Street has not yet decided whether it is now a Tango Trust, actually, a group of high financiers have banded themselves together to "corner" the tango talent. That means that the "South American" tango is to be commercialized. The commercialization of fads always marks the beginning of their end. It works like this:

Society takes up a fad. It flourishes on the Avenue and makes a noise like a dollar. Then the keen nosed men of money, seeing currency, take hold of it and organize it. The craze then takes on a commercial aspect. Society hears about it and abandons the fad. The lower strata learn that society has dropped the fad, so each in turn drops it.

That has been the history of a long procession of fashions. Never before perhaps did anything so intangible as a dance go through this evolution, but it is dollars to doughnuts that with the money kings playing ping-pong with the tango, it will lose its popularity.

The Tango Trust is no joke. The papers are on file at Albany for the incorporation of a company which proposes to control all the leading exponents of the art, and to describe it, to construct for the privilege of running tango teas and tango parlors in the leading hotels and restaurants and to arrange to provide hotels in other cities and in the country and seaside summer resorts with the services of those who have gained fame through the exercise of nubile feet in the "jardins" and "palais de danse" that dot the metropolis.

As planned the new corporation will be something of a cross between the "hat check trust" that now operates in many of the big hotels and the United Booking Office which supplies vaudeville acts for theaters. The better class of hotels and other places of entertainment are already being besieged for contracts and privileges, "star" dancers are being interested, and within a short time, says James Powers—"the Mystery of Wall Street" not the actor of that name—the Tango Trust will be in full swing.

MAY CRITICISE THE TARIFF IN NOVEMBER

Voters of United States Can Express Opinions at Congressional Election on Administration.
(By Winfield Jones.)

Washington, D. C., June 1.—The voters of the country will have an opportunity to express their opinion of the blunders of the Wilson democratic administration at the November elections.

Judging from every sign visible in Washington and from reports from all sections of the country that reach the capital, the Americans voters are patiently waiting, with anxiety almost, the opportunity to say what they think of the blunders of the Wilson democratic administration at the November elections.

The blunder of the Wilson democratic administration at the November elections will be decided almost wholly upon the administration's tariff law and the Mexican blunder. The tariff law is the prime measure of administrative accomplishment. If it is still in effect, democratic, that fact cannot but be accepted generally and accurately as an endorsement of the tariff act.

The issue is clean cut. Hundreds of thousands of men who have been employed at good wages, have been in idleness for many months. Factories have been compelled to curtail their operating forces because of a diminished output of goods.

Is the tariff responsible? Many will say so. Others will insist that it is. The question will be debated pro and con with vigor in every congressional district in the country, and while the personal popularity of the candidate in many cases will triumph over argument, in the main result will determine what the majority of the American voters have to say in the only effective way they are permitted to speak upon great national questions.

Among many costly thoughts on view in the national democratic platform of 1912, this is still precious, says the New York Sun.

"The high cost of living is a serious problem in every American home. The republic party in its platform, attempts to escape from the responsibility for present conditions by denying that they are due to a protective tariff. We take issue with them on this subject and charge that excessive prices result in large measure from the high tariff laws enacted and maintained by the republican party."

The high tariff laws have been laid low. The citadel of protection has been broken up. The surplus provided by the Payne-Aldrich tariff of iniquity has been transformed into an honest, a virtuous and a warring deficit. American manufacturers, fattening on stupifying ease under the old wickedness, have had their noses turned to the grindstone by a congress and an administration eager to educate, improve and reform the delinquent beneficiaries of protective greed. These have not been equal to or grateful for their educational privileges. They see the export of manufacturers and the import of manufacturers' materials dwindling. They see American industrial production shrink. Their wits seem not to have been increased by the competition in which the Adam Smith of Warrington, the Hon. William C. Redfield, so yearned to subject them. Yet a Washington dispatch in Monday's Sun contained this triumphant vindication of the tariff and the democratic method of lowering the cost of living:

"Meantime the talk about increased supplies of food and reduced prices through the removal of duties on foodstuffs is making manifest its real qualities. The records of the six months show an importation of $2,000,000 pounds of fresh beef in that period, or about two ounces a month for each individual in the United States."

"The official records of the department of commerce show that prices at which the importation occurred were more than 50 per cent higher in March under the new law than in September, the last month of the old law, while in many of the other articles on which duties were reduced the prices abroad were promptly advanced."

Two ounces of beef a month, 24 ounces of beef a year for every man, woman and child, a sum not notably increased when allowance is made for babies, sucklings and vegetarians. What more can any country ask? If foodstuffs prices are up, it is because people are better off than they were under the democratic administration.

MISS LUCY GRANGER WEDS JEROME DAVIS

Marriage Solemnized on Saturday
Evening at Home of Bride's Parents, Mr. and Mrs.
B. Granger.

Miss Lucy E. Granger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Granger, 403 North Jackson street, and Jerome R. Davis of Rockford, were united in marriage at seven-thirty o'clock Saturday evening at the bride's home. There were about fifty guests present.

Miss Lou MacDonald sang "I Love You Truly" and "Love's Old Sweet Song," after which the members of the bridal party took their places at the table. The bride, sister of the bride, played the wedding march from Lohengrin. The ring service was read by the Rev. Joseph Chalmers Hazen of the Baptist church.

Miss Mae Granger, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Joan Haight of Rockford attended the groom.

The bride's gown was of white tulle, trimmed with lace. She wore a white bridal veil and carried a bride's bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her attendant wore a gown of pink chiffon over satin and carried pink roses.

The Granger home was attractively decorated with pink roses, palms, ferns and bridal wreath. The dining room, where a two course wedding luncheon was served, was beautifully trimmed with a profusion of pink roses and the chandelier was draped with festoons of bridal wreath.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis left Saturday evening on their wedding trip, and they will be at home in Rockford after July first.

The bride is an attractive young woman of many accomplishments and enjoys the sincere regard of a large circle of friends. She has always made her home in Janesville and was graduated from the local high school in the same class with Mr. Davis.

Mr. Davis is a former Janesville young man, son of George Davis of this city. After finishing his course in the high school, here he attended Armour Institute, Chicago, and is at present employed as a civil engineer and draftsman, with a large firm of architects in Rockford.

On The Spur of The Moment

Up-to-the-Minute:
The modern girl,
She wears a curl
Above her ear,
And she looks queer
Her skirts are tight,
She cannot walk;
Her curls so tight
She cannot talk,
She has three plumes
Upon her hat—
A hat that's flat,
A pancake thing,
By Jingo,
Her coat is like
That of the male
And has a funny
Little tail.
And here's another
Funny statement,
She wears a bustle
On in front,
What will the modistes,
By pretext,
Do to the poor

A Summer Romance.
The following romance is contributed by a reader of which, or rather, of whom we have numerous and sundry. We don't know whether Constant Reader wrote it or whether he cut it out of his copy time. We don't believe the latter can be the case, for the magazines seldom print good stuff. Now from the poem:

I met her first down by the sea—
The landlady's lovely daughter, 'mid
The fairest maid along the shore,
Other beautiful maids galore. Her
Eyes were bright, her eyes were blue,
Her smile was sweet and good and true.

It was upon one summer night,
I met her in the pale moonlight. You saw the girl had won my heart; I wooed her from the very start. Believe me, she had ceased to shine, I began to shine, and she was mine.

A solemn look came in her eye and then she made me this reply:
"I do not know as I can say, right off hand, if I may, do not know exactly what you mean, I've never got; but if perchance you still persist, I'll gladly put you on the spot. There's possibly a day or two later, the present season's through;
great—that is, upon the usual rates,
I charge $10.00 cash per day for serving as a fiancée."

And ere the silvery moon went down, I turned and beat it back to town.

Why Hotel Stenoga Swallow Their

"Say, sweetheart, do you work here just for fun?"
"I got a gal who looks a whole lot like you. Do you mind if I stick around and gossip a while? Gee, this is a lonesome town."

"You spelled five words wrong in that last letter, and I got in touch with Daniel Webster, kid."

"Won't you come out and help me pick out a necktie? My wife always does it for me when I am home."

"I ain't never saw a stenographer so quick and accurate as you. Your grammar is just as perfect as mine."

My Daughter Must Be a Lady

Leisure is alluring—to the one who does not have it.

Doing nothing is attractive—until you come to do it.

Many a fond mother paints a beautiful picture of ease, luxury, unstinted comforts, tender care, for her daughter—all that money can buy.

But when the wolf of want barks at the door, as it has a way of doing, the fine gowns lose their sheen, their style, their beauty, and become but common rags—the innocence and helplessness for which the girl with money was admired become the weaknesses through which she falls.

The girl who is really happy is the one who is useful, independent, self-reliant, self-supporting, and the ability to be self-supporting is the result of training—always.

The mastery of stenography furnishes a sure means of self-support—and the mastery may be quickly attained.

From six to eight months in our shorthand department will qualify the average young lady having a fair education, some native ability, and the inclination to work, for a good position where promotion will be certain.

Stenography will give her a respectable place among respectable people who appreciate worth and accomplishment.

Young ladies should write, call, or telephone for free, valuable information concerning our work.

He did not think he ever remembered Katherine, strong, firm-willed Katherine, looking so pathetic and helpless. She dropped her hands from her face and he was surprised to see the misery in her eyes and the drawn lines about her mouth.

"I'm cold—I'm cold! I've had an awful chill," she tried to say, her teeth chattering with the sudden cold that seemed to freeze her lips. "Don't touch me, Bob!" she choked. "I've done it. I've done it. I always knew I'd do something terrible—I've done it." Her voice was hollow and her eyes were blank and expressionless.

"Katherine, tell me what's the matter? Can't you tell me?" There was a world of love and tender solicitude in Bob's voice. His manner seemed to rouse her, and she began to pace the floor excitedly.

"My mind's made up. It's all over between us now. I'm going to marry Slade," the words were uttered quickly, breathlessly.

"You're going to marry Slade," Bob could scarcely believe his ears. "You must be crazy!"

"No," her voice was firmer now. "But I'm twenty-seven years old, twenty-seven years old." She bit the words off with a vengeance. "Soon I'll be thirty—thirty—do you hear? And you're the only man I've ever cared a rap for. I've tried to marry other men, rich men, men with important positions. Once I nearly did it in Europe. Then I thought of you, and I waited. I waited. And it's too late now. I can't wait any longer. I've waited and wondered ever since I got home what I could do. What I could do! Slade's the answer, Bob, Slade's the answer."

"My God, Katherine!" Hayes was completely bewildered at this unexpected outburst. "Slade's married."

"I don't care," she retorted, defiantly, gaining courage as she talked. "A woman more or less is nothing to that man. He'll move a mountain. He'll sweep her out of his path."

The hot blood surged up into Hayes' face. He was agitated at this deep into the soul of the woman he had thought was tender and dear and sweet. Her complete disregard of Mrs. Slade enraged him.

"So this is what Slade has done!" His fists were clenched. "This is what he's after. This is what he wants. I'm not surprised," he went on, bitterly. "It was always in you."

"Yes," she met this accusation, an angry light in her eyes. "It was always in me. I always had to have everything, be everything. I can't stay here and be a nobody. We're getting the horribly poor. If we look prosperous, it's because nothing is paid for. When I was a child I always had to lead all the little games." She was talking rapidly, earnestly. "Then when I grew up there was only one place here—Katherine Strickland, and after there was never but one woman left this place and did the things I've done and made the successes I've made, and now—to come back here—and settle down! When I'm Mrs. Slade I'll have the life I'm after—money and power and Europe—the world."

"Don't forget Slade," came sarcasm from Hayes. "Don't forget Slade!" and he came toward her. "You'll have Slade, too. You'll have to live with him, a man who has lived all his life with another woman."

"Don't!" she commanded. "He is not marrying me for a sort of housekeeper."

"You'll be his wife just the same." Every word was a sting.

"Yes—you'll have your revenge," Katherine answered quietly, more to herself than to him. Her voice dropped wearily. "Every time he kisses me—every time he comes into the room. But I'll get used to him, I suppose. Women get used to that sort of thing."

"Yes, and then go to the devil! I'll tell you what I think of you," he stormed. "You're a bad woman."

You're as rotten as they make them.

She Hesitated in Bewildered Fashion.

There's no type so low. You're bad to the marrow. London and Washington and Paris have done for you. You've butterflied all over the world, till you're a heartless dead, junketing about from one embassy to another with all your pretty little cheating tricks and not a decent thought in your head."

"I won't listen," she gasped, amazed at his denunciation of her.

"You will listen!"

"Don't, oh, don't say such things, Bob," she pleaded.

"Why not?" he demanded. "You who plan to do such a devilish thing in the eyes of God and of men, can you be afraid to hear what it really is you plan? You will listen!"

He took a step nearer. He caught her roughly by the shoulders. He buried his lips into the soft tendrils of hair around her ear, as he almost shouted: "You are going to rob a poor little woman—step into her house and snatch away her husband—and the only excuse you can offer is that you want his money. Why don't you rob somebody outright and get away with it? It's more honest."

Katherine shrank from him with a cry of protest.

"And all the while you love me," he went on, passionately, "you love me—"

"I don't," she sobbed.

"You lie!" he accused, hotly.

"Well, supposing I do—what can you give me?" she asked coolly.

"What can I give you?" he repeated. Then with a look of utter loathing in his eyes: "You contemptible little—"

and he flung her from him.

"You're going to sell what's mine to the highest bidder," he panted.

"But Slade's not divorced yet, and before you get out of this dirty mire you'll regret it. You'll find yourself so deep in scandal—"

"I won't," Katherine protested, vehemently. "I won't have a scandal!"

"They'll say he's your lover," his rage turning into fury.

Katherine looked at him as if she had been turned to stone. Then the real significance of what he had said flashed to her—a flame the rage that was burning in her heart—rage at him—conditions—at everything! She gripped her fingers around one of the lovely roses at her belt and crushed them to a pulp. Then she ripped them from her gown—his roses—and threw them among the blazing logs in the fireplace.

She turned to him with a bitter laugh. "I'm through with you—and your insults," and she fled from the room.

Katherine did not go a moment too soon, for scarcely had the folding doors closed behind her when the door from the smoking-room swung open, and with noisy talk the few remaining members of the dinner party straggled in.

In her agitated condition, even Katherine would have found it difficult to regain her composure sufficiently to meet these men.

Ex-Governor Hibbard was in a particularly happy frame of mind. The senator's excellent viands and the senator's choice wines and the senator's Haynas had succeeded in making him feel well satisfied with the world in general and with Slade in particular. His round face was flushed and his string tie a trifle awry.

"Had a good time, senator," he said, removing his cigar, "but there were too many awkward falls here for me to night. When I was governor of the state I never wore one. No, nor a plug hat, either."

"I never wore one, and I never will," seconded Colonel Smith, a typical long, lean, lanky westerner, with the inevitable western cut beard and hair a bit too long.

"Governor, you're right," and Strickland gave each man a resounding slap on the shoulder. "Colonel, stick to your guns. They're a nuisance. Now, boys, forget your homes and your trains. The others are all gone. Let us, the ringleaders, adjourn to the dining-room and over one of my punches."

The governor patted his stomach tenderly. The mention of the senator's punch was all that was necessary to weaken his desire to catch a train.

"Ah! Strickland's punch! I'm with you."

"Now, gentlemen," interrupted Merritt in a business-like manner, "before we split up tonight it's understood we're all Slade men?"

"All Slade men!" was the unanimous shout from the colonel, the ex-Governor Hunt, pious old Pop Hart and Ingram.

"And we're preparing to cope with Slade's domestic trouble should it come up, and it will," went on Merritt.

"The devil, Strick!" broke in the colonel. "Can't it be patched up until after election?"

"No, gentlemen. The senator was unctuous but firm. We must take Slade as we find him—or drop him. We're in the hands of a peculiar and dominant personality. We can't make these big fellows to order."

"What I can't understand," complained Hibbard, throwing the stub of his cigar into the fireplace, "is why they can't get on together."

"Take it from me, gentlemen, it's her fault," exclaimed Merritt, as much in favor of Slade as he had previously been opposed to him, now that Fannie was appeased with the money for her trip to Europe.

"She's preparing to desert him now," Strickland assured them. "It's irrevocable."

"Well, we can't blame him for being deserted," agreed Hibbard.

"You bet we can't! My wife deserted me," declared the colonel with an attempt at facetiousness, "and she didn't do it a day too soon, either. I've gone right ahead ever since."

"Now, then," went on the industrious Merritt, "three of us own papers. These are our points: Mrs. Slade is—er—er—a woman who has no sympathy with her husband—shuns public life—is never seen—refused even to see me. And no sympathy for him, don't forget that."

"Yep! Just like my wife," grunted the colonel.

"I don't see how the public can blame him," declared Hibbard.

"They can't," asserted Hart.

"Why, she's a semi-invalid," amended Strickland.

"My wife hasn't seen her out since she drove him out of the house five weeks ago," declared Hart.

"Good! We'll use that," exclaimed Merritt, eagerly. "A semi-invalid—when she's ready to be moved she will be taken away at her own request. I'll publish it myself. I'll start the ball a-rolling. Why, gentlemen, the world ought to pity that man."

Hayes had stood the conversation as long as he could.

"Do you realize that you're attacking this woman unjustly?" he broke in, walking into the middle of the group.

"This is not at all true."

"You keep out of this game," warned Strickland.

"Well, boys, we're all agreed," declared Merritt. "It's one for all, then—"

"And all for one," added Hibbard, excitedly.

"Hip! Hip!" began Merritt, when the door opened and the butler announced:

"Mrs. Slade."

The hurrah that had been on each man's lips died a sudden death. They looked at each other in consternation.

"Mrs. Slade!" gasped Merritt.

"Whew!"

The eyes turned toward the door saw a tiny, gray-haired woman, with great, questioning brown eyes, hesitating in bewildered fashion as she found herself confronted by a roomful of men. Her gown with its tight basque and full skirt was dowdy and badly cut, in marked contrast to the fashionable, clinging gowns of the women who had graced the room a short time previous. Her white gloves were a fraction too short to meet her short sleeves, and left exposed thin arms and pointed elbows. But the tender face, with its sweetly expressive mouth, was unchanged. The lovely eyes were more appealing, as filled with wistful shyness, they gazed about the room.

Slade's Eyes Darkened and an Ugly Scowl Appeared on His Face.

"I'm afraid it's a little late for me to come," she managed to say, as the senator came up to her with outstretched hand.

"This is an unexpected pleasure," the senator assured her with an urbane smile. "Gentlemen, Mrs. Slade."

"Why, my dear madame," and Merritt greeted her effusively, "I'm glad to know that the reports to the senator have been exaggerated. Your health is now—"

"Oh, I never felt better in my life, sir," Mary declared, puzzled that he should ask such a question.

Hayes hastened to the little woman's side.

"Oh, Rob," she exclaimed, relieved to see a familiar face. As she turned to Hayes, Slade appeared at the smoking-room door, and as he recognized the dowdy little figure his eyes darkened and an angry scowl appeared on his face. Strickland saw the expression and hastened to urge the men to follow him into the dining-room.

CLOCK ON THE COOKER

Its Purpose Is to Start the Cooking Operation at Desired Time.

The device in accompanying cut hardly has the appearance of a clock stove, but that is just what it is, an electrical clock stove, and with a little care in its use it can be made to do the work of a big kitchen range at no greater cost for fuel, but with a greater convenience. For instance, the viands may be prepared for cooking and placed in the stove at any time and the housewife may go out to an auction bridge party, but having adjusted

COOK STOVE OPERATED BY THE CURRENT.

The clock will start the cooking operation at an hour which will permit of the various articles being thoroughly cooked and ready to serve at the hour she returns. The clock turns on the current and also cuts it off again when sufficient heat has been applied to perform the task. It is claimed that the cooking is better done than with the use of stove or range and there is no danger of burning the food.

Dinner Stories

One hot day, it is said, a lady who was walking along a country road, noticed a little boy kept close beside her. Whether she went faster or slower, or moved to the right or left, he still kept by her side.

"Look here, little boy," she finally cried, "why are you following me like that? Go away!"

"I ain't doin' nothin', lady," pleaded the little fellow. "Please don't send me away."

"But why do you want to follow me?" answered the child.

"You are the only shady spot along the whole road."

Walking from Hope to Hayfield by a path over the moors, writes a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, I found the hills covered with snow.

A freezing east wind made things anything but pleasant. At one point I had to admit that I had lost my way, and it was with relief that I found a signpost. The inscription was blotted out with frozen snow.

I climbed the post and with great difficulty and personal discomfort thawed the snow off with my already half frozen hand and succeeded in deciphering the inscription. It said: "Keep to the path."

Knew the Sex.

When a woman canvasser asked an old farmer to sign a petition in favor of a woman's movement, he eyed the document for a while with suspicion. "No, I'm agin' it, sure," was the reply, with the emphasis of a man who had had some domestic infelicity. "A woman who's allus a-movin' is allus a-gettin' in trouble. If you got anything to keep her quiet I'll sign it."

Make Your Ad. Explicit

A lone woman, owner of an eight-room, modern home, tired of living alone. She would do as others did. She would also be progressive—she would advertise. She wrote out an ad. It was short and to the point. She would not invest much in the publicity game. Her ad ran like this: "For Rent—Three rooms at 435 Farley Ave. Call afternoons."

It cost a quarter to run her ad for three days. She sat at home and waited. She sat at home and waited. She sat at home and waited.

This reiteration tells you she waited patiently for the results of her ad. They came not. In the same paper were other ads along the same lines. There is competition in every walk of life. Would the game be worth the playing if there was not?

A friend of hers called. To her she related her trial at the advertising game and it's unsuccessful results. The friend listened, then sat down and wrote her an ad that brought her more roomers than she could accommodate. There is a right and a wrong way to ad-writing as well as to other things. The second ad ran like this: "Wanted—By a woman living alone. Roomers, preferably women. Large light, airy rooms, heat, light, bath. Good residential section, reasonable rates. References given and required. 435 Farley Ave., 'phone Green 66."

FINANCIAL.

Our business for the last fifteen years has been to loan money. During that time we have been successful to learn a few things about securities. We would not now after these years of experience be loaning our own money on these same securities in these same localities if we could find anything better.

Based on the fact we have yet to sell the first mortgage on which there is a loss or even inconvenience to a customer we recommend these as good. Gold-Stacked Loan & Credit Co., W. O. Newhouse, Vice Pres. 2-5-22-31.

POINT OF AN ANCHOR TORE VESSEL'S SIDE CAUSING THE WRECK

CRUSTED WITH BLOOD IT IS FOUND SHOVED THROUGH HULL OF COLLIER.

Search Still Being Made for the Bodies of Those Who Went Down With Empress of Ireland.

NO CHANGE IN LISTS

Search Still Being Made for the Bodies of Those Who Went Down With Empress of Ireland.

Montreal, June 1.—The sharp point of an anchor projecting from the twisted bow of the collier Storstad, explains why that vessel did such terrible damage when she rammed the Empress of Ireland early Friday morning in the St. Lawrence river. An examination today of the collier's shattered hull revealed the anchor jammed in a position where it could have ripped through the hull of the Empress like a great can-opener. The anchor point and portions of the twisted steel surrounding it bore stains of blood.

Preparations were begun here today with the inquiries into the disaster which cost 969 lives. The inquiry will be conducted by a joint commission of Canadian and British shipping experts.

Pilot's Story.

Pont Nault, who was on the Storstad, told the St. Lawrence river pilot today that the Empress of Ireland, his first officer, and Pilot Lechance, who brought the Storstad from Father Point to Quebec, were on the boat at the time of the collision.

Similar charges before M. Watkins of Newcastle, will be dismissed, it is said, and the case turned over to the circuit court.

CHARGES WINTERS IN COURT AFFIDAVIT

Charges Winters in R. H. Abel, Detective, Believes Father and Mother of Disappeared Child Conspirators.

Newcastle, Ind., June 1.—R. H. Abel, the detective employed to investigate the disappearance of Catherine Winters, aged nine, on March 20, 1912, today filed an affidavit of information in circuit court, charging Dr. W. A. Winters and his wife, and W. H. Cooper, a former roomer in the Winters home, with conspiracy to commit a felony.

Similar charges before M. Watkins of Newcastle, will be dismissed, it is said, and the case turned over to the circuit court.

Mrs. Helen L. Grenfell, vice president of the Colorado Law and Order league and penitentiary commissioner of that state, had an audience with President Wilson and told him her organization's views of the strike situation. She differed with Judge Lindsey in that she believes that 8,000 men should not be thrown out of work by closing down the mines until the strike is settled, when only 1,600 men are holding out for the recognition of their unions.

ALL'S PEACE BETWEEN MEDIATORS AND ENVOYS, ANYWAY; HERE THEY ARE ON THE JOB

No matter what the outcome of the Niagara Falls peace conference may be, certain it is that the various envoys and mediators are very peaceful among themselves anyway. They meet daily in the Clifton hotel for short conferences. This picture was taken a few days ago at one of the meetings.

TWO VETERANS MEET AFTER FIFTY YEARS

O. W. WALLIS AND THOMAS FROST, FORMER JANESVILLE MEN, HAVE REUNION.

BOTH BELIEVED DEAD

Enlisted in Captain Harlow's Company and Served Side by Side in Many Battles.

O. W. Wallis of Chicago, and Thomas F. Frost of St. Paul, Minn., both former Janesville men, who enlisted as boys under the late Captain E. G. Harlow in the twelfth Wisconsin battery, and served together during the Civil war, held a reunion yesterday at Frost's home. They had parted in 1864. Each thought the other dead.

In January, 1864, Capt. Harlow's company went into winter quarters at Huntsville, Ala. With the rest of the 12th battery, Wallis and Frost, who had grown up together as boys, were in the battery and had seen service side by side behind their field gun in the campaigns of Vicksburg, Chattanooga and Missionary Ridge. For nearly three years they had been comrades in the hottest kind of fighting.

Soon after the battery went into winter quarters Wallis was given a commission as first lieutenant. At the same time he was transferred, going with the First Wisconsin heavy artillery to serve in the defenses at Washington, D. C., where he remained until the close of the war. Frost went on with Sherman in his march to the sea.

That was the last they heard of one another during the war. Each thought the other was dead. Last week Capt. Wallis, now a leader in the Loyal Legion, met Capt. Frost of St. Paul, Minn., a member of the Twenty-first Illinois, Gen. Grant's regiment. They talked of old times.

"It's funny how the closest comrades lost all trace of each other," Capt. Wallis said. "I had a comrade named Frost. I haven't heard a word of him since January in '64."

"I can't be Thomas G. Frost, who enlisted in Janesville," Capt. Frost said. "I can," Capt. Wallis replied, "and I am." Frost is postmaster at St. Paul, Minn. Wallis wrote to him, they arranged to meet Saturday—to celebrate Memorial day together. Frost's physician told him he could not go to Chicago. Consequently Capt. Wallis left for St. Paul to see him.

It was a pleasant meeting. Capt. Wallis said, "after being separated for fifty years, I have been able to locate only six or seven of the entire battery. Two of them have died this month."

Mr. Wallis has a brother, Thomas Wallis, who resides in Janesville and has many friends in this city. Frost also has acquaintances among the Janesville Civil war veterans and visited here several years ago. Wallis was at Vicksburg at the time of the dedication of the Wisconsin monument and was in the party with some of the Janesville men.

WILL START OILING ON MAIN STREET TODAY

Superintendent of Streets P. J. Goodman will start oiling South Main street today after having repaired the sides of the street and thoroughly prepared the roadway for the oil.

Fourth car of oil was received this morning, which will be used on Main street. To date thirty thousand gallons of oil have been used and excellent results accomplished because of the high grade quality oil and the cleaning of the streets before they are oiled.

AMUSEMENTS

McMAHON AT APOLLO.

Tonight is amateur night at the Apollo and all would-be vaudevillians are requested to advise the management in advance of their intention to act, if possible. There promises to be some fun if the ones who have pledged themselves appear on the stage.

There will be one attraction, however, that will be far from an amateur act and that is Jack McMahon, the contender for the heavy-weight championship of the world, who has made Janesville his home and established training quarters here. This popular big "white hope" will give an exhibition of a professional boxer preparing for a fight, such as bag punching, rope skipping, shadow boxing as well as a spirited bout with his old time sparring partner, "Soldier Murphy." McMahon gives notice that he will meet any and all comers for a three round exhibition on the stage at the close of his act.

EDUCATION IN THE ARMY MOST COMPLETE

Government Looks After the Schooling of Its Soldier Boys.

How Uncle Sam keeps the officers and men in his army up to the top notch of efficiency is told in a special report on "Educational System in the American Army," the annual report of the commissioner of education, just issued. The statement was prepared by Capt. Douglas MacArthur and approved by General Leonard Wood.

"No country in the world has as complete a system of professional scholastic training for its officers as the United States," says the report. "This is due to the inherent difference between the military establishments of foreign nations and that of our own. Their armies are at all times kept upon a war footing, as a result of which they have ample opportunity for the perfect training of the personnel in the practical duties of the military profession."

"In such an army the main object is to train every man for the efficient performance of his duties in the grade which he holds, when war comes. The soldier does not dream of becoming a captain merely as the result of war except as a vacancy is made for him in the casualties of battle. Only in the same way does a captain expect to become a colonel; nor the idea be tolerated that great numbers of trained line officers are to be suddenly transferred to various staff positions."

"Such organizations are founded upon the theory that there is nothing mysterious in the art of war; that technical and scientific training is needed by only a small, select group of officers; that certain things which a Napoleon must know, every officer must know, and can as readily acquire as he; while those things which differentiate a Napoleon from other generals can not be acquired in any school, not even in that of war."

"Such a system would be thoroughly unsound if transplanted to the American army, the organization of which is quite different from continental armies. In fact, the most striking feature in our service is the absence of what constitutes the very essence of the foreign establishment; that is, a great standing army serving in corps, divisions and brigades, in which the average officer of any grade learns the details of his profession by practical work and with the minimum of theory."

"Our system of military education must therefore differ from that of the other great nations of the world. It must be such as to educate out officers so that they will be able at a moment's notice, when the war expands, to perform the duties of far-advanced grades and to render efficient service in the army, both line and staff, in which they are not commissioned in time of peace. For this reason we have established a progressive system of schools designed to teach officers and recruit them only by their individual capacities for its assimilation. The duty of the man-in-arms in all grades from lowest to highest."

"The military educational system of the United States comprises: The military academy at West Point, for the education of cadets; post schools for the instruction of enlisted men;arrison schools for the instruction of officers in subjects pertaining to the performance of their ordinary duties; the army service schools at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., including the army school of the line, the army staff college, the army signal school, the army field engineer school, the army field service and correspondence school for medical officers; the medical service schools, consisting of the engineer school, Washington barracks, D. C., the coast artillery school, Fort Monroe, Va., the mounted school, Fort Riley, Kan., the army medical school, Washington, D. C., the school of fire for field artillery, Fort Sill, Okla., the school of musketry, San Diego, Cal., the schools for bakers and cooks, Washington barracks, D. C., and the school of San Francisco, Cal., the training school for saddlers and for battery mechanics of field artillery, Rock Island Arsenal, Ill., the school of instruction for enlisted men of the regular army selected for detail for duty with the organized militia, the engineer trade schools, the army war college, Washington, D. C., the schools of instruction for college students, and the military departments of civil institutions at which officers of the army are detailed under the provisions of law."

SAVING OF WOOD IN MAKING BY-PRODUCTS IS VERY ESSENTIAL

Forest Products Exposition Being Held in New York, Presents Valuable Facts About Our Forests.

(From the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture.)
The forest products exposition now being held in New York, presents many models and charts from the forest service which show utilization of wood, particularly the use of by-products.

The amount of wood used and wasted is shown in a series of models depicting all stages of the lumber industry, from the tree standing in the forest to the boards and shingles in the finished dwelling. The first model of this series shows a number of trees standing in the forest. The next model shows these same trees felled and forming a pile of logs and a heap of tops and branches. The succeeding step is a miniature sawmill, beside which are piles of lumber, of slabs, and of sawdust, from the logs shown in the previous model. The next model shows what becomes of the rough boards after they have been through the planing mill; the resultant material is sectional planks, of edgings and trimmings, one of shavings, and one of the planed boards. Last comes a newly finished dwelling house, around which are the wood and sawdust of the lumber left over from the building.

What Wood is Wasted.
The relative amount of material used and wasted is indicated roughly in these models, but is shown accurately in the figures given in the following table of the exhibition in a series of diagrammatic charts. In the logging process, 12 per cent of the standing tree is left in the stumps and tops, leaving 88 per cent to go to the sawmill. The various forms of waste shown at the sawmill constitute about 45 per cent of the original tree so that a rough board constitutes the remaining 43 per cent. Most of the sawmill waste is unavoidable, it is asserted, and due to economic conditions; the millmen say they take out all they can afford to. The seasoning process costs this to 42 per cent. After the planing and other finishing processes, the finished lumber forms only 33 per cent of the tree. The waste involved in building the house amounts to 4 per cent more, so that the proportion of the original tree which finds itself finally in the finished dwelling, is not more than 33 per cent.

How Waste is Utilized.
But all of the two-thirds need not be wasted. Some of it at least should go into by-products, according to the forest service, which is studying such utilization. The bulk of it, however, such as tops, bark, slabs and edgings, can be made into charcoal, turpentine, tannic acid, wood alcohol, acetate of lime, pulp and paper, and even the sawdust is made into wood alcohol and grain alcohol, and used in different forms for fuel.

Illustrations of this utilization of mill waste are shown at the exposition in a series of wall cases. One case shows the use by a knife manufacturer of the dogwood waste of a maker of shuttle blocks. Another case shows how the waste involved in making large school furniture is converted into scrubbing brush, backs for a brush factory. Other cases display shoe lasts made from discarded tannins, the use of the veneer cores for mine rollers and for cover into sawdust into floor sweeping compounds, and dowels of various sizes manufactured from cooperage waste.

Non-Inflammable Shingles.
Another exhibit shows cases of the inflammability test, upon shingles, treated with certain chemicals. One half of a shingle is treated, the other half is untreated. With the best of conservatively treated shingles, which causes the untreated half to burn does not affect the treated half.

Portions of the various mechanisms for using and sawing wood from an important part of the exposition. Then a model preservation plant is shown, consisting of two small storage tanks, a pressure cylinder, a yard and track together with photographs of one of the largest wood preservation plants in the country. This is not a complete working model; only certain forms are used to show the general scheme of the plant. Another exhibit shows a small running model of a paper machine. This is used in explaining the process of making paper from wood. The samples of paper made at this laboratory from woods not generally used, in comparison with standard woods, illustrate the possibility of using new species and utilizing the mill waste.

The cup system of turpentine is on exhibit. This system is not as injurious to the tree as the old boxing method, reduces the fire hazard and gives greater yields. The forest service favors the use of the cup system and the exhibit will show the two methods contrasted, both as to injury to tree and difference in yield.

A Miniature National Forest.
Beside the main exhibition relating to forest products, there are certain exhibits relating to other branches of forestry. One of these consists of a miniature model of a Rocky Mountain national forest. This model shows a ranger station and a government tree nursery, besides a system of roads, trails, bridges, fire lookout towers and telephone lines, all built and maintained by the government, by means of them the national forests are both protected from fire and rendered accessible to use.

Another striking model suggests the contrasted effects upon stream run-off and erosion of forested and

THE EXPRESS IS IN THIS TOWN AND IN TO STAY

FOR seventy-five years—three-quarters of a century—the express has been the right-hand of the shippers of commercial America. The Express came to Janesville in 1854 and it came to stay. For 60 years it has been the right-hand of commercial Janesville.

It is here to stay. The other day when reports went out that the express companies might retire from business, a protest went up. From whom this protest—the express companies? No! The merchants of the country—shippers everywhere—petitioned Congress that no action be taken that might have the effect of forcing the express companies to retire. Commercial organizations all over the land have joined in this appeal to Washington.

CARDS BREAK EVEN; LOSE TO ROCKFORD BUT DEFEAT BELOIT

Rain Stops Game Sunday With Score 3 to 2 for Rockford—White Sox Defeated by Footville, Saturday.

The Janesville Cardinals broke even in their games here Saturday and Sunday, winning from the Beloit North Ends, Memorial day, 11 to 10 and losing to the Rockford Highlands yesterday 2 to 2 in seven innings. The rain gave the fans assembled at Sunday's match a chance to witness a game under difficult circumstances. Had the weatherman kept from pouring his bucket until the Cards had a chance to cover the full nine laps, there might be a different story to tell, but as it is, the Cards have their first defeat chalked against them. Crandall was hurrying for the locals and pitched good ball, only allowing five hits and fanned six in the seven innings. Hall was behind the rubber and showed excellent work with the big mitt, handling the speedy delivery of the Milton college twirler in faultless style and was death to the ambitious Rockford base runners when they attempted to pilfer the cushions.

Nelson, rated as the best amateur pitcher that inhabits Rockford, was on the mound, and while he appeared to have nothing but a prayer, and a slave, only allowed three hits. His slow ball had the Cards swatting swinging and when they did connect it was straight to the fielders' waiting hands. The outfielders of the visitors killed every near hit that came into their territory. Rockford opened the game by nailing Crandall's speed ball for two clean drives and a sacrifice which netted them an earned run. Walsh first up, slammed the ball, pitched underhand, slow ball and sandlot curves, bouncing easy grounders or popping flies to the outfield. In the third Porter allowed two "baby flies" to slip through his hands and when Graves came through with his second hit, the sacks were loaded. Two runs came across on Ericson's single. This ended Rockford's scoring, for Crandall had them under cover during the rest of the hostility.

The Cards did not share in the run column until the fifth when Nelson showed signs of wildness. Crandall waited him out for a pass ticket to first. Tommy Sullivan walked, advancing Crandall, Lenahan poled out, timely hit, scoring Crandall. Butters, next up, whanged out a wallop and Lenahan legged it for home from second. Hill flew to Ericson and the rain stopped the pastime for half an hour. In the sixth inning neither side saw second and the game was adjourned when the weatherman tipped over the bigger dipper with hailstones and rain.

The Cardinals made it two straight over the Beloit North Ends in their combat Saturday afternoon at 10 in Driving park by a score of 10 to 10 in a wild and woolly slugfest. The Beloit nine started strong and for the first half of the game had things coming their way, but Bush, their slub artist, was unable to find the plate and when he did pitch them across, the Janesville players slammed the necessary hits after the sixth inning.

Butters was on the mound for the Cards with Hall for a battery mate. After the first inning, Butters got going and pitched a fair game, but not up to his usual standard. Bush, who is a cast off from the Madison state league, walked seven men, hit three batters, which goes to show the time it of his control. Butters whiffed ten and Bush swung for the fences down over the air route. Wilson, a former Card player, was Bush's battery mate and caught a beautiful game. Flinging started behind the bat for the Cards but was replaced by Hall in the second.

In the first inning Beloit scored four runs, when Hill booted two grounders, allowing two runners to score. Wilson, two men occupying the sacks Wilson booted a hit scoring them the other bevy of markers. Much to surprise of the fans Wilson stole second and third, but died when Hill finally hung the ball and threw out. Bush, things started breaking for the Cards in the third when Tommy Sullivan walked. Trevorrah singled and they executed a double steal. Hill delivered a single scoring both men. Nehr scored Hill. Butters was out on a close play at home.

Beloit scored in the fifth and Janesville by two hits, also scored. The sixth was the turning point of the game for in this session the Cards made the most of Bush's inability to locate the plate and forged ahead by scoring four tallies. Tommy Sullivan walked for the third time and W. Sullivan poled out a double. Trevorrah, slugger and the bases were packed when Nehr walked and Berger sent two runs home with a drive to right. Beloit tied the score up in the eighth when Butters hit Wootton who scored on Christian's drive. Owens batting for Berger saved the Cards from defeat when he slammed out a double and came home on an infield out.

The Cardinals are scheduled to meet the Footville White Sox and one of the best games of the year is expected for the Footville nine are rated as being one of the best aggregation of ball tossers in this section.

White Sox Defeated. Star pitching by Lentz for the Footville nine defeated the Janesville White Sox Saturday in their melee at Footville Saturday afternoon. The score of 4 to 2. Lentz allowed four scattered hits and whiffed sixteen men and had the Sox standing on their ears swinging at the elusive pill. Only four of the Sox regulars were in the line-up and the failure to hit, recorded a defeat against them. O'Hara and Bleasdale were the battery for the locals and O'Hara came through the conflict with the heavy hitting nine, allowing four hits and striking five men. The Sox put across their two scores in the first inning when Fineran and Bleasdale registered on Cronin's hit. Footville made it two apiece in the fourth, when Owens and Canary hit, with nobody out, and came home on infield outs, when O'Hara failed to cover home while Bleasdale was making assists. The home nine won in the ninth when Silverthorn and Owens crossed with the winning runs. The White Sox are scheduled to play Port Atkinson next Saturday at Port Atkinson and with their regular aggregation expect a victory.

Janesville Stars Lose. The Anderson Lumberjacks of Jefferson proved too much for the Janesville Stars Sunday, the Stars being defeated 5 to 1 at the Jefferson nine's diamond.

Hoveland found the weak point of the lumberjacks and struck thirteen out, retiring the side in the third inning. The Stars brothers were the battery of the home nine, and between the pair they fanned eight.

The first six innings were air-tight ball. The Stars only run was secured when Spohn came home on a squeeze play with Hoveland at bat. In the seventh the Stars started booting the ball and the Jefferson nine totaled three runs off the Stars' mistakes. Neis of the lumberjacks finished the game with a perfect batting average getting four hits in four times up, and his sticking put the winning runs across.

FRENCH PILOTS WIN INDIANAPOLIS RACE WITH RECORD TIME

Rene Thomas, Driving French Delage Breaks All Records Over Sweep-stake Speedway Saturday.

Rene Thomas, French, pilot of the French Delage, set a new speedway record over the Indianapolis track Memorial day, when he won the American classic five hundred mile race at the killing pace of 32.47 miles per hour. Joe Dawson's record made in the 1911 race was 78.72 miles per hour.

The American drivers again suffered defeat at the hands of the foreign speed demons. Barney Oldfield finishing fifth, Grant, who never fails to finish, landing seventh, Christian ninth and Rickenbecher, who is just breaking into the game, finished tenth. Duray and his "baby" Peugeot was second to receive the checkered flag and with this place goes the honor of a speed average of a fraction less than Thomas, although Duray's mount was equipped with the smallest motor of the field. Thomas' teammate, Guyot, was close behind the diminutive Peugeot, with Jules Goux in fourth position.

When the drivers had settled down after a killing pace of eight hundred miles per hour, the first hundred miles Thomas was leading, Duray second, Guyot, who was showing great Hans Wagner avenged himself neatly the other day when the Brooklyn Dodgers treated him to the grossest of insults. Somehow the Brooklyn bunch seemed to have acquired the idea that Hons was all in for ever in the matter of batting, and in the ninth inning of a game with the Pirates they passed a recruit infielder who came to bat that they might get a chance at Wagner, humiliating outrage that had been offered Hans in his whole career. Hans was accordingly most grievously offended. And just to show them he picked out one of Ragons' best curves and put the ball far in the middle-distance. There were two outs with one on and Hans ran to first and chased an over to the bench laughing in his cuff at his opponents.

Joe Jeannette says that Jack Johnson will knock Frank Moran out with ridiculous ease. Other opinions on this matter are being had from every side. It has been agreed by all, however, that if Johnson attains his old-time shape he should be able to put up a good fight and also that if Moran beats Johnson he will regard himself as the world's heavy champ. Further valuable dope along this line may be had for a self addressed envelope, care this office.

SUCCESSFUL OPENING OF THE GOLF SEASON

Members of the Sinissippi Golf Club Enjoy a Pleasant Afternoon and Evening Saturday.

Saturday marked the opening of the Sinissippi Golf club for the present season. Delightful weather brought out many visitors who did not play, while the course was dotted with the players who held a tomb-stone match that was interesting and unique. Bridge was enjoyed by the ladies in the afternoon and at six-thirty a delicious supper was served to over a hundred members and friends on the spacious porches. This was followed by dancing, the music being furnished by Miss McGinley and Mr. Menzies. Little Miss Helen Franklin gave a most charming Spanish dance for the first number on the evening's program in costume and was forced to respond to an encore with a second one, showing dainty and dainty steps. She proved a very attractive part of the day's entertainment and danced beautifully. The members of the house committee, Miss Emma Richardson, chairman, Mrs. J. L. Wilcox, Mrs. Stanley Dunwiddie, Miss Marion Blodgett and Miss Eloise P. Field, have arranged for a series of card games on Tuesday afternoons during the summer, starting on Tuesday, May 9th. There will be no game or club dance this coming week. These will be followed Dawson collided with Gilhooley's giant Isotta, both cars turning over. Dawson was severely injured while the others escaped unharmed. The race steadily and when the leaders flashed around on the three hundred mark only eighteen of the starters were in the race. Guyot fought gamely for the lead with his "baby" and climbed into first place, only to lose because of a tire change. The mounts of the leaders were withstanding the strain well and became a factor in the race at the three hundred mark, but lost when he stopped for fuel. Thomas was three laps ahead of his rivals at the 400 mark and was going fine. The position of the leaders was unchanged during the last fifty miles of the long grind. All previous records were broken by Thomas.

One of the greatest features of the race was the finish of William Carlson, American, in ninth position, with a machine that was fueled with coal oil, as used for lamp lighters. Guyot, who started only thirteen laps behind, finished only thirteen laps behind. Those running when the tenth car crossed the line were: Wild Bob Burman, in Keeton; Haupt Dusenberry and Ralph Mulford in the Mercedes.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Fair tonight and probably Tuesday. Slightly warmer Tuesday. Light variable winds shifting to southerly Tuesday, and probably becoming to fresh.

UNVARNISHED FACTS.

There seems to be in the state of Wisconsin a common practice among officers and employees of the state to draw several different salaries from the taxpayer in the same year.

A commissioner will be appointed, or officer elected to an office, where the compensation is fixed by the state at so much per year; yet, these same officers and commissioners will draw salaries for services rendered this state, although they are already drawing a yearly salary supposedly as compensation for their entire time. The same practice seems to be in evidence among the professors at the university and as we would necessarily expect, the students have imbibed the same idea from the cup of theories.

As an illustration:

L. B. Wolfenson, assistant professor of Semitic Languages and Hellenistic Greek, has a salary of $2,000.00 from the Free Library Commission he draws $800.00 from the Legislative Reference Bureau, $1,800.00 from State Printing Board, $704.92 from revisor of statutes, $283.88.

Total, $5,027.80

By what right has a professor of languages drawing a salary of $2,000 per annum to teach languages at the university, to be paid by the state for enacting laws, the sum of $1,800, and then stepping into the Free Library Commission and drawing $800 more? Not contented with that he becomes a revisor of our statutes and draws $283.88, and then he serves on the State Printing Board.

Is it possible that this man is an expert in each of these five different lines? Is it possible that this professor of Greek can be of any assistance whatsoever in drafting laws and revising statutes, and at the same time be an expert in printing matters? If this was a solitary instance then it might be passed, but a more thorough examination will disclose 50 or more professors practicing the same system.

Now in reference to our state commissioners, here is the eminent Professor Adams who draws a salary of $5,100.00 from the Tax Commission, as one of the tax commissioners of this state; yet, he draws a further compensation on the Free Library Commission. Can we blame the students, of whom there are many in the employ of the state of doing the same thing, when their teachers set the example? Is the scholar in the school as a rule apt to be better than his teacher?

Here is Halford Erickson of the Railroad Commission drawing a salary of $5,000 and expenses, the amount in all $5,733.81, also drawing out of the public treasury as an expert under the public utilities, a branch of the Railroad Commission, $261.00; and also given credit for another disbursement of $149.81. Is it possible that having hired out to the state at the rate of five thousand dollars a year, he may charge the state for other services in the same department? Is it right?

Even our law-makers have adopted the rule. L. L. Johnson, assemblyman, drawing a salary and mileage as assemblyman $340.80, from the Insurance Dept., $94.90, from the Fire Insurance Investigation $247.01, and another sum from the Fire Insurance Investigation of $4.90.

Total, $1,927.70

Can it be possible that a legislator drawing a salary from the insurance department is a proper person either to investigate it or pass laws in reference to it?

These instances might be multiplied to cover hundreds and hundreds of such cases. The instances cited here are not different, except in amounts, from others.

There seems to have grown up in this state a lack of proper sense of right and wrong regarding public moneys, that has culminated in the greatest state expense in proportion to the size of the state and its population that has ever existed in this Union. There seems to be men, holding office, with a blunted sense of right and wrong. These men are not accused of criminal dishonesty, but they are men who have been brought up, and boys that are educated in this same wrong idea of the use of public money, and have been in control for the last fifteen years in this state—what else can we expect but an excess of offices, office-holders and extravagance? When a state with less than three millions of people has payrolls with upwards of 77 hundred names simply to do the states business, it is very evident that the struggle of the officers, of the state, is not to do effectively and carefully the business of this state, but their ambition has grown to be, to do as many things experimentally as possible, at the expense of the people of the state.

And that the love of power, and the love of office has overshadowed their ideas of right and wrong. The only remedy is a complete revolution in the methods of the administration of public business, and in the use of public moneys, which is not simply the amount paid by the tax payers but the moneys that come into the state treasury from every source, and ought to be used with the care and guarded with the same jealousy, that the small estate of a deceased friend is guarded by the administrator or executor, under proceedings in county court.

Until that rule is practiced, we can not expect any improvements in the state affairs.

The improvement can not come from the politician, or from the man who wants office from private gain, or to testify an ambition. It can only come from the independent, non-partisan movement where the officers are acting as a duty, which is a part of the burden of the right of citizenship.

Now that Coraniza has been turned down by the A. B. C. prize envoys at Niagara Falls he has decided to set a government up all of his own. Meanwhile the A. B. C. envoys have decided upon Felix Diaz, Florida's fellow conspirator when Madero was assassinated, as the provisional president of Mexico proper and doubtless Wilson will recognize this murder while he refused to recognize Huerta.

Officially this is straw hat day although straw hats have been more or less worn during the past ten days. Strange how custom makes slaves of people. People must wear certain clothing at certain times of the year whether it is comfortable or not.

The terrible disaster in the St. Lawrence river, when a mighty ocean vessel was sunk, almost without sight of land, and over a thousand perished is one of those happenings that can not be explained under ordinary circumstances.

The next big holiday is the Fourth. Everyone is eagerly looking forward to the celebration that is going to be some celebration. The committee in charge report that the arrangements are being completed for every detail of a most successful day.

Wisconsin politicians are getting a trifle warm under the collar as the time approaches for the announcement of platform and attitude on state issues approaches. They realize that the Non partizan movement is growing in strength daily.

ULSTERITES AND SUFFRAGETS CALL ASQUITH NAMES

Premier Asquith (a new photograph)

Recent events in England have served to make Premier Asquith a very much hated man by at least two elements of the British public. First the suffragets dislike him because of his continued and very firm opposition to equal suffrage. And he is quite disliked by the Orangemen of Ulster because under his leadership Ireland has been given home rule.

About the Tango.

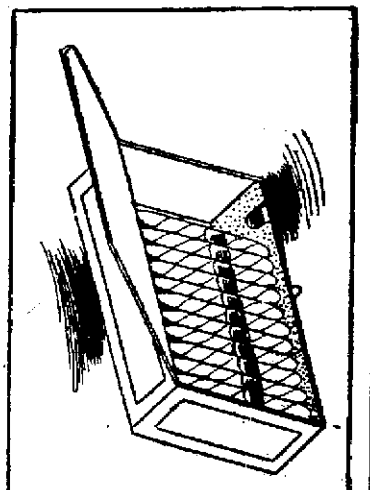

The tango mystery grows all the time. It is asserted upon every hand that nobody dances it. Still, the furor continues. Ask a dancing master if he teaches the tango and he will tell you no. He knows what it is—he has seen it done by experts—but he doesn't teach it. It is not a popular dance. There seems to be two tangoes. One is the tango which comes to us from the Argentine Republic—a dance for experts—a slow, difficult thing that is not worth doing at all unless one can do it very well, indeed. The other tango is any new dance—the Castle walk, the hesitation waltz, or anything our fathers did not dance. This latter is the popular tango danced all over the country. It is the one at which the people who do not care about dancing continually thunder. It is not the tango at all. The tango is a myth, and they are knocking the daylight out of it every day.

CIGARS KEPT MOIST

A New Box Which Has a Humidor Inserted Along Its Length.

The cigar dealer keeps his stock in a case which has provision made for maintaining the interior at a desired degree of humidity, so that when they are taken from the case the cigars are just right for consumption, but the purchaser buying a box of cigars has not always the means at hand to keep his smokes in this condition. But with the new invention recently patented by a Philadelphia genius every box of cigars will be supplied with the means of keeping the moisture at the approved moisture point. This is accomplished by making the box a shade wider than usual to allow room for the insertion of a perforated plate. The latter is fitted with flanges which maintain it at a slight distance from the sides of the box, and this room offers opportunity for supplying a moistened pad. The proximity of this moisture to the ends of the cigars permits the latter to take up the vapor readily and each cigar will be supplied with the same amount of moisture without regard to its position in the box. The fault which is so common with other humiders, that the top layers take up all the moisture, is entirely overcome by the new method.

ARMY GIRL TO BE AN AUTUMN BRIDE

Miss Helen Heyl

Miss Helen Heyl, daughter of Col. C. H. Heyl, U. S. A., and one of the prettiest girls in the army circle at Washington, will become the bride of Lieut. Milo P. Fox of the engineers early in the fall. The engagement was recently announced.

Cat Reasoned Wisely.

Romances quote a remarkable story about a cat's reasoning power. While a paraffin lamp was being trimmed, some of the oil fell on the back of the cat, and a cinder from the fire shortly afterward touching it, the fur became ignited. The cat instantly made for the door and running up the village street, plunged into the watering trough. She had seen her human friends at home put out their kitchen fire with water, and she must have reasoned from this fact.

Unkind Words.

Unkind words do as much harm as unkind deeds. Many a heart has been stabbed to death by a few little words. There is a charity which consists in withholding words, in keeping back harsh judgments, in abstaining from speech, if to speak is to condemn. Such charity hears the tale of slander, but does not repeat it; listens in silence, but forbears comment, then locks the unpleasant secret within the very depths of the heart.

ANNIE LOUISE CARY

And Her Favorite "Robin Adair"

The indisputable queen of song in her day was Annie Louise Cary. She was one of the world's famous contraltos when she retired from the operatic stage at the very height of her career in opera. She retained the sweet, wholesome characteristics of the American girl all during her musical triumphs. She made her debut in Copenhagen, although she studied in Milan. For three years she delighted European audiences before making her appearance in America. For over twelve years, with the exception of a brief European tour, she delighted American audiences with the charms of her voice and personality. But to hear her sing "Robin Adair," that simple old song, and that masterpiece of Arthur Sullivan's "The Lost Chord," and Longfellow's "The Day is Done," with the rich tones of the happy, good-natured personality that always charmed, she always left the audience breathless and spellbound. "Robin Adair," "The Lost Chord," and many other favorites of Cary, are to be found in "Heart Songs," now being distributed to the readers of this paper. See Coupon elsewhere in this issue for terms.

HARRIS WANTS TO BE GEORGIA'S GOVERNOR

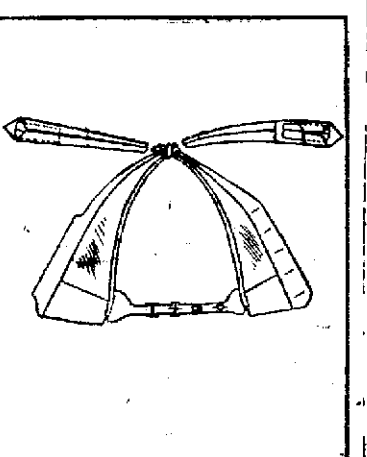

William J. Harris.

William J. Harris of Atlanta, Georgia, who succeeded E. Dana Durand as chief of the U. S. census bureau a year ago, has just resigned in order that he may seek the Democratic nomination for governor of Georgia. Harris is one of the best known Democrats in the South and at the time he was named chief of the census bureau was chairman of the Georgia state Democratic committee. He is about thirty-nine years old and is president of a fire insurance company in Atlanta.

VEST AND NECKTIE IN ONE

Overcomes Many of the Objections to the Old Style of Garment.

There are some masculine dress reformers who take issue with the vest, claiming that it is an entirely superfluous piece of clothing, having many of the undesirable features of the feminine corsets which are generally condemned. The cut of the vest shown herewith is unique in that it has no back and therefore gives the wearer greater freedom of movement and also that there is com-lined with it a necktie feature. It has been recently patented. The two separate sections forming the front of the garment, are held together, when adjusted on the person of the wearer, by means of a belt at the lower portion and an extension of the upper portion, passes around the neck and forms either a towel tie or a four-in-hand.

WOMEN HAVE TO SMILE

In a great many cases and try to make those around them happy, while they are racked with the pain of organic trouble. Few men realize how common such condition is. The remedy for this condition is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—a simple remedy made from roots and herbs, which for forty years has been overcoming the most obstinate ills of women. Every woman suffering from female ills owes it to herself and family to give it a fair trial. Advertisement.

The Evening Chit-Chat

THE OPPORTUNITY EYE.
THE OTHER day I heard a young man complaining because the business field which he had contemplated entering was overcrowded. "Ten years ago," he said, "I would have had a good chance to rise quickly, but today, I can hardly get a look-in. It's the way with everything now-a-days. That's just my luck." Can't you imagine him saying just the same thing about "ten years ago," and yet the ten years ago of that time would be today; and the ten years ago of today was some other discontented young man's present.

To be sure the business which he spoke of is overcrowded. Ten years ago it was a new and more promising field. But there are other fields of endeavor which are as new and promising today as that was ten years ago. Ten years from today someone will be envying the men who saw and seized the opportunities of today.

There are always new opportunities in every direction. The point is to recognize them when they are opportunities and not when they are fulfilled possibilities.

A friend of mine has a charming old-fashioned house, which she picked up several years ago for a mere song. The neighborhood has grown extremely desirable, and the house itself she has gradually developed into a quaint and charming old place.

Now, many of her friends think they would like a house like hers. But when they try to buy something of the sort in the neighborhood they find its price prohibitive. And then they say how lucky she was to have gotten such a bargain. But she wasn't lucky at all. She was far-sighted. The house was dilapidated when she bought it, but it had possibilities. And she saw them. The neighborhood was rather remote but she believed that with less so. And she was right. A place which cannot be bought for twice the money it cost her. Not because she was lucky, but because she saw an opportunity when it was an opportunity.

There are always opportunities everywhere. Conditions about us are continually changing. The world is never at a standstill, and with new conditions there are always some new opportunities. These are for the people who know how to realize them, and recognize them while they still are opportunities.

Cultivate the opportunity eye. If you find the chances in one direction have been so fully taken advantage of that they are no longer opportunities, turn to look in another direction. Study the future, try to see which way the world is going and then you can get the vanguard instead of tagging along in the rear, grumbling about your "luck."

four, one cup of sugar, one egg, one eighth teaspoonful of salt, one half of thin cream, two tablespoonfuls of vanilla. Mix the flour, sugar and the salt, add the egg slightly beaten and the milk gradually; cook over hot water twenty minutes, stirring constantly at first; should the custard have the curdled appearance it will disappear in the freezing. When cool add the cream and flavoring; strain and freeze.

Chocolate Sauce — One square of baker's chocolate, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half cup of boiling water, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Melt the chocolate, add the butter and pour on gradually the water. Bring to the boiling point, add the sugar and let boil fifteen minutes; cool slightly and add the vanilla.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

DON'T you go and get sorry for yourself. That's one thing I can't stand in nobody. There's always a lot of folks you can be sorry for, but of yourself, ain't you proud you ain't got a hare lip? Why, that one thought is enough to keep me from ever being sorry for myself.

—Mrs. Wiggs.

DAINTY THINGS FOR COMPANY.

A simple and elegant salad is made of a slice of pineapple placed on a paper doily with the center filled with chopped almonds and cherries mixed with mayonnaise.

Pineapple sandwiches are most delicious. Fill them with whipped cream and chopped pineapple. Garnish with a cherry.

Pineapple canapés are new. Spread circles of bread toasted with cream cheese and lay on thin slices of stuffed olives. Serve on a paper doily.

Vanilla ice cream will belong to a different class entirely when served in sherbet glasses garnished with strawberry sirup and sprinkled with chopped green citron. A few pistachio nuts also will add a pretty color.

Lady finger sandwiches are well liked especially by the children. Put two fingers together with jam or jelly or marmalade.

Plain iced cookies are transformed when decorated with bits of candied cherry and leaves of green cut out of citron.

Fruit Rice Pudding—Stir a tablespoonful of gelatin softened in three tablespoonfuls of hot water into a pint of whipped cream. Add a cupful of cold boiled rice, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a cupful each of pineapple juice and orange juice, a cupful of chopped pineapple and a cupful of chopped blanched almonds. Put into a mold and when firm serve.

Fruit Canapés—Cut rounds from sponge cake and saute in a little butter. Spread cooked fruit on each piece. Make a sauce of the fruit juice thickened with a little cornstarch and made rich by the addition of butter and sugar if needed.

Date Gems—Sift together two cupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, add one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of ginger and a little salt. Heat one-half a cupful of molasses and a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan until the butter melts. Then stir in the dry ingredients alternating with a half cupful of milk until well blended. Now add one cupful of chopped dates which have been sprinkled with flour. Bake in well buttered muffin tins.

Manhattan Pudding—One and one-half cups of orange juice, one-quarter cup of lemon juice, one pint of heavy cream, one-half cup of powdered sugar, one-half tablespoonful of vanilla, two-thirds cup of chopped walnut meats. Mix the fruit juices and sweeten to taste. Turn the mixture in a brick mould. Whip the cream and add the sugar, vanilla and nut meats; pour over the first mixture to overflow the mould; cover with buttered paper, fit on the cover and pack in salt and ice and let stand three hours.

Vanilla Ice Cream—Two cups of scalded milk, one tablespoonful of Women Worth While

MRS. BENJAMIN F. HARRISON.

(By Selene Armstrong Harmon).

One woman unashamedly admits, but with a twinkle of the eye that lies her seriousness, that she will be an office-seeker; if American women are enfranchised, she has already decided upon the office she wants, and has fixed a covetous eye upon it.

"I tell my friends in Indianapolis," says Mrs. Benjamin F. Harrison, "that I want to be street cleaning commissioner there when women are permitted to hold such office. I know a woman who confesses that she has for years nursed a secret ambition to be park commissioner, and we feel sure that between the two of us we could work wonders. Then, after we had transformed our home city into a model Spotless Town, I should like to be the head of the street cleaning department of every other American city. The streets of all of them are in crying need of being properly kept."

"You ask me to give you seriously my views on the suffrage question, I am not a working suffragist. But I can see the need which every woman who is a property owner, and every woman who works along business lines has of the ballot. The thought of universal suffrage is not to me, indeed, I wish even American women could work along more conservative lines. I do not even like the idea of walking in a street parade—that is, I would not like it for myself. And yet I do when I think of a spirit of criticism for the women in America who are working for equal suffrage. Certainly it would ill become a woman who has had no experience in working for the suffrage cause to criticize its trained workers, or to tell them how to conduct their campaign."

Mrs. Harrison has spent much time in traveling abroad and has known many notable people on both sides of the Atlantic. She was presented at the court of St. James and also to the Kaiser and his empress at Berlin. When in Holland she was presented to Queen Wilhelmina. She has spent a great deal of time in Munich which she loves better than any other European city. Winter before last Mrs. Harrison and her young daughter, Elizabeth, came under the spell of Egypt, and spent two months at Cairo and on the Nile.

Next to her daughter's education, Mrs. Harrison's main interest lies in music and pictures. In New York, where she has spent the past winter, she has delighted to divide her time largely among operas, concerts and art exhibitions. Her seventeen-year-old daughter, a girl of unusual beauty and culture, is at school at Westover, Connecticut.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is it correct for a girl of twelve to tell other boys that she is sixteen?

(2) Should a boy go with a girl without an introduction?

(3) Is it manly for a girl to wink at a boy who is looking at her while on the street?

(4) If a young man should speak to a young girl, should she speak without being made acquainted?

(5) If a girl goes with a boy for some time and then does not like his company, how can she get rid of him?

(6) Should a boy kiss a girl good-night when just first acquainted?

(7) Is the author "John Burroughs" still living or not? If dead, what?

(1) It is never right to tell a lie.

(2) A boy always has a great deal more respect for a girl who expects him to keep around and and some respectable person to introduce him to her.

(3) Winking is always unmannerly, and I don't think a nice girl will do it.

(4) It wouldn't be best.

(5) Refuse his invitations, don't see him when he calls, act indifferent when she sees him and keep out of his way. He'll soon get tired. Of course, she can tell him point blank that she has had enough of him, which would be the more honest way, but most girls want to let a fellow down gently.

(6) Not when he's first acquainted nor any other time, unless he is engaged to marry her.

(7) John Burroughs is a very fine old gentleman, and not a book. He is still living and is healthy and happy in his California home. He is one of the greatest naturalists in the world.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two friends 14 and 15. (1) Is it improper for us to go out evenings with a boy?

(2) Is it right for a girl to ask a boy to go to some place of amusement?

(3) If a boy friend accommodates us home and asks for a kiss, what should we do? (4) What is the proper time for girls of our age to be in evenings?

(1) Really, dears, I think you would be better off if you did not go out evenings with the boys. Can't you see enough of them during the day? If you must go out with the boys at night, some older member of your family should be with you.

(2) Not unless he is a very old friend and it is an emergency of some kind; then she should be prepared to pay at least her share of the expense. (3) Just tell him that you're not that kind of girl and if

Strawberry Short Cake
 For dinner every Sunday and once or twice on week days is not too often to serve this delicious dessert as long as strawberries last. The whipped cream for the top is not absolutely necessary, but it makes a short cake more attractive to the eye as well as to the taste.

K C Strawberry Short Cake
 By Mrs. Janet McKensie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

2½ cups sifted pastry flour; 2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1 teaspoonful salt; 1 cup shortening; about 1 cup milk; butter; 2 baskets strawberries; between 1 and 2 cups granulated sugar; 1 cup or more double cream.

Hull, wash and drain the berries; reserve a few choice berries to garnish the top of the cake; cut the rest in halves and mix with the sugar. Beat the cream and set aside to chill. Sift together, three times, the flour, baking powder and salt; work in the shortening; then mix to a soft dough with the milk. Spread the mixture in two layer cake pans. Bake about twenty minutes. Turn one cake out on a hot plate, spread liberally with butter, pour on part of the berries; cover with the second cake, also spread with butter, pour over the rest of the berries and put the whipped cream above, with the whole berries here and there.

HERE'S THE VERY LAST WORD IN FASHIONS FROM NEW YORK

Women who like to keep in touch with the very latest thing in fashions are learning to attend the moving picture shows. Moving picture actresses always wear the latest and the best. This is particularly true of "Our Mutual Girl," shown above. In picture No. 1 she is shown in a blue serge walking costume. In No. 2 she is also in a walking costume, while in No. 3 she appears in an afternoon frock.

You're as rotten as they make them.

She Hesitated in Bewildered Fashion.

There's no type so low. You're bad to the marrow. London and Washington and Paris have done for you. You've butterflied all over the world till you're a heartless jade, junketing about from one embassy to another with all your pretty little cheating tricks and not a decent thought in your head.

"I won't listen," she gasped, amazed at his denunciation of her.

"You will listen!"

"Don't, oh, don't say such things, Bob," she pleaded.

"Why not?" he demanded. "You who plan to do such a devilish thing in the eyes of God and of men, can you be afraid to hear what it really is you plan? You will listen!"

He took a step nearer. He caught her roughly by the shoulders. He buried his lips into the soft tendrils of hair around her ear as he almost shouted: "You are going to rob a poor little woman—step into her house and snatch away her husband—and the only excuse you can offer is that you want his money. Why don't you rob somebody outright and get away with it? It's more honest."

Katherine shrank from him with a cry of protest.

"And all the while you love me," he went on, passionately, "you love me—"

"I don't," she sobbed.

"You lie!" he accused, hotly.

"Well, supposing I do—what can you give me?" she asked coolly.

"What can I give you?" he repeated. Then with a look of utter loathing in his eyes: "You contemptible little—"

and he flung her from him.

"You're going to sell what's mine to the highest bidder," he panted.

"But Slade's not divorced yet, and before you get out of this dirty mire you'll regret it. You'll find yourself so deep in scandal—"

"I won't," Katherine protested, vehemently. "I won't have a scandal."

"They'll say he's your lover," his rage turning into fury.

Katherine looked at him as if she had been turned to stone. Then the real significance of what he had said flashed a flame the rage that had been burning in her heart—rage at him—at conditions—at everything! She gripped her fingers around one of the lovely roses at her belt and crushed it to a pulp. Then she ripped them from her gown—his roses—and threw them among the blazing logs in the fireplace.

She turned to him with a bitter laugh. "I'm through with you—and your insults," and she fled from the room.

Katherine did not go a moment too soon, for scarcely had the folding doors closed behind her when the door from the smoking-room swung open, and with noisy talk the few remaining members of the dinner party straggled in.

In her agitated condition, even Katherine would have found it difficult to regain her composure sufficiently to meet these men.

Ex-Governor Hibbard was in a particularly happy frame of mind. The senator's excellent viands and the senator's choice wines and the senator's Havana had succeeded in making him feel well satisfied with the world in general and with Slade in particular. His round face was flushed and his string tie a trifle awry.

"Had a good time, senator," he said, removing his cigar, "but there were too many swallowtails here for me to night. When I was governor of the state I never wore one. No, nor a plug hat, either."

"I never wore one, and I never will," seconded Colonel Smith, a typical long, lean, lanky westerner, with the inevitable western cut beard and hair a bit too long.

"Governor, you're right," and Strickland gave each man a resounding slap on the shoulder. "Colonel, stick to your guns. They're a nuisance. Now, boys, forget your homes and your trains. The others are all gone. Let us, the ringleaders, adjourn to the dining-room and over one of my punches—"

The governor patted his stomach tenderly. The mention of the senator's punch was all that was necessary to weaken his desire to catch a train. "Ah! Strickland's punch! I'm with you."

"Now, gentlemen," interrupted Merritt in a business-like manner, "before we split up tonight it's understood we're all Slade men!"

"All Slade men!" was the unanimous shout from the colonel, the ex-Governor Hunt, pious old Pop Hart and Ingram.

"And we're preparing to cope with Slade's domestic trouble should it come up, and it will," went on Merritt.

"The devil, Strick!" broke in the colonel. "Can't it be patched up until after election?"

"No, gentlemen. The senator was meticulous but firm. We must take Slade as we find him or—drop him. We're in the hands of a peculiar and dominant personality. We can't make these big fellows to order."

"What I can't understand," complained Hibbard, throwing the stub of his cigar into the fireplace, "is why they can't get on together."

"Take it from me, gentlemen, it's her fault," exclaimed Merritt, as much in favor of Slade as he had previously been opposed to him, now that Fannie was appeased with the money for her trip to Europe.

"She's preparing to desert him now," Strickland assured them. "It's irrevocable."

"Well, we can't blame him for being deserted," agreed Hibbard.

"You bet we can't! My wife deserted me," declared the colonel with an attempt at facetiousness, "and she didn't do it a day too soon, either. I've gone right ahead ever since."

"Now, then," went on the industrious Merritt, "three of us own papers. These are our points: Mrs. Slade is—er—er—a woman who has no sympathy with her husband—shuns public life—is never seen—refused even to see me. And no sympathy for him, don't forget that."

"Yes! Just like my wife," grunted the colonel.

"I don't see how the public can blame him," declared Hibbard.

"They can't," asserted Hart.

"Why, she's a semi-invalid," amended Strickland.

"My wife hasn't seen her out since she drove him out of the house five weeks ago," declared Hart.

"Good! We'll use that," exclaimed Merritt, eagerly. "A semi-invalid—when she's ready to be moved she will be taken away at her own request. I'll publish it myself. I'll start the ball rolling. Why, gentlemen, the world ought to pity that man."

Hayes had stood the conversation as long as he could.

"Do you realize that you're attacking this woman unjustly?" he broke in, walking into the middle of the group.

"This is not at all true."

"You keep out of this game," warned Strickland.

"Well, boys, we're all agreed," declared Merritt. "It's one for all, then—"

"And all for one," added Hibbard, excitedly.

"Hip! Hip!" began Merritt, when the door opened and the butler announced:

"Mrs. Slade."

The hush that had been on each man's lips died a sudden death. They looked at each other in consternation.

"Mrs. Slade!" gasped Merritt.

"Whew!"

The eyes turned toward the door saw a tiny, gray-haired woman, with great, questioning brown eyes, hesitating in bewildered fashion as she found herself confronted by a roomful of men. Her gown with its tight basque and full skirt was dowdy and badly cut, in marked contrast to the fashionable, clinging gowns of the women who had graced the room a short time previous. Her white gloves were a fraction too short to meet her short sleeves, and left exposed thin arms and pointed elbows. But the tender face, with its sweetly expressive mouth, was unchanged. The lovely eyes were more appealing, as filled with wistful shyness, they gazed about the room.

Slade's Eyes Darkened and an Ugly Scowl Appeared on His Face.

"I'm afraid it's a little late for me to come," she managed to say, as the senator came up to her with outstretched hand.

"This is an unexpected pleasure," the senator assured her with an urban smile. "Gentlemen, Mrs. Slade."

"Why, my dear madame," and Merritt greeted her effusively, "I'm glad to know that the reports to the senator have been exaggerated. Your health is now—"

"Oh, I never felt better in my life, sir," Mary declared, puzzled that he should ask such a question.

Hayes hastened to the little woman's side.

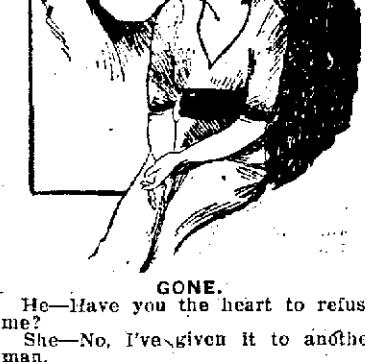

"Oh, Bob," she exclaimed, relieved to see a familiar face. As she turned to Hayes, Slade appeared at the smoking-room door, and as he recognized the dowdy little figure his eyes darkened and an angry scowl appeared on his face. Strickland saw the expression and hastened to urge the men to follow him into the dining-room.

CLOCK ON THE COOKER

Its Purpose is to Start the Cooking Operation at Desired Time.

The device in accompanying cut hardly has the appearance of a clock, but that is just what it is, an electrical clock stove, and with a little care in its use it can be made to do the work of a big kitchen range at no greater cost for fuel, but with a greater convenience. For instance, the viands may be prepared for cooking and placed in the stove at any time and the housewife may go out to an auction bridge party, but having adjusted

COOK STOVE OPERATED BY THE CURRENT.

The clock it will start the cooking operation at an hour which will permit of the various articles being thoroughly cooked and ready to serve at the hour she returns. The clock turns on the current and also cuts it off again when sufficient heat has been applied to perform the task. It is claimed that the cooking is better done than with the use of stove or range and there is no danger of burning the food.

One hot day, it is said, a large woman who was walking along a country road, noticed a little boy kept close beside her. Whether she went faster or slower, or moved to the right or left, he still kept by her side.

"Look here, little boy," she finally cried, "why are you following me like that? Go away!"

"I ain't goin' nothin', lady," pleaded the little fellow. "Please don't send me away."

"But why do you want to follow?" "Because," answered the child, "you are the only shady spot along this whole road."

Walking from Hope to Hayfield by a path over the moors, writes a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, I found the hills covered with snow.

A freezing east wind made things anything but pleasant. At one point I had to admit that I had lost my way, and it was with relief that I found a signpost. The inscription was blotted out with frozen snow.

I climbed the post and with great difficulty and personal discomfort thawed the snow off with my already half frozen hand and succeeded in deciphering the inscription. It said: "Keep to the path."

Make Your Ad. Explicit

A lone woman, owner of an eight-room, modern home, tired of living alone. She would do as others did. She would also be progressive—she would advertise. She wrote out an ad. It was short and to the point. She would not invest much in the publicity game. Her ad ran like this: "For Rent—Three rooms at 435 Farley Ave. Call afternoons."

It cost a quarter to run her ad for three days. She sat at home and waited. She sat at home and waited. She sat at home and waited.

This reiteration tells you she waited patiently for the results of her ad. They came not. In the same paper were other ads along the same lines. There is competition in every walk of life. Would the game be worth the playing if there was not?

A friend of hers called. To her she related her trial at the advertising game and its unsuccessful results. The friend listened, then sat down and wrote her an ad that brought her more roomers than she could accommodate. There is a right and a wrong way to ad-writing as well as to other things. The second ad ran like this: "Wanted—By a woman living alone. Roomers, preferably women. Large light, airy rooms, heat, light, bath. Good residential section, reasonable rates. References given and required. 435 Farley Ave., 'phone Green 66."
